Kansas Wind Supply Chain Workshop January 14, 2010

Great Lake WIND Network will facilitate a half-day workshop designed to provide Kansas manufacturers of all sizes an orientation to the supply chain needs of the wind energy systems industry. Topics covered will include: the basics of wind energy systems, quality standards required by OEMs; challenges involved in making the transition to the wind energy supply chain (e.g. size and scale of products); and overall growth trends in the wind industry.

The workshop is an excellent opportunity for existing Kansas manufacturers to learn more about the business development opportunities in the fast-growing wind power industry and to discover how they may enter into the supply chain.

Agenda

11:30 a.m.	Registration opens
11:30 a.m.-1 p.m.	Sponsor Exhibit
1-5 p.m.	Session

Who Should Attend?

Kansas manufacturers with an interest in entering the wind supply chain, including companies involved in making electronics, control systems, hydraulics, fasteners, and brakes, as well as operating metal foundry, forging, or fabrication facilities; and local officials seeking growth opportunities for their existing businesses.
